The State Free Soil Convention was in session yesterday with Andrew L. Robinson of Evansville in the chair. We noticed in attendance George W. Julian, S. S. Harding, M. R. Great Triumph—Gregg's visit to Indianapolis.

—Question of Veracity settled.

It will be remembered that the renowned Milton Gregg, editor of the New Albany Tribune and late member of the constitutional convention from the county of Jefferson has been charged with receiving the sum of ten dollars for money which he never expended. To vindicate his dear character he came up to Indianapolis under the protection of W. W. Woolen, Esq., another Whig editor, of ferocious appearance and biligerent propensities, to examine the archives of State. The result of this visit is thus paraded forth in the columns of his paper:

"When this issue of veracity was raised by Mr. Brown and his echo, we did not choose to meet it at once, by denouncing the statement of the Sentinel as an unmitigated falsehood. But we determined at the very first moment that we could tear ourselves away from our business, to visit Indianapolis, and there vindicate our statement beyond the possibility of a doubt. We have done so, and the result is most humiliating to our traducers. In the presence of a friend, who went with us to the Auditor's office, Dr. Ellis admitted that no part of the account was in our hand writing but on the contrary in the hand writing of Mr. Wheeler, with the single exception of the endorsement of our name across the book. We were also fortunate in meeting Mr. Wheeler, himself at Indianapolis, to whom we had the privilege of referring to sustain the truth of our explanation. Mr. Brown himself has been constrained to admit the falsity of his statement; but he tells us it was made upon the information of others.

Now let us suppose a case for the purpose of illustrating this grave question.

Suppose Milton Gregg had been indicted for obtaining money from the State of Indiana by false pretences, and on the trial the Auditor of State should be summoned and by a subpoena duces tecum he produces the following voucher:

VOUCHER NO. 5203.

The State of Indiana To Milton Gregg, Dr.
To railroad fare to Madison and back $5.00
To traveling expenses, besides fare 5.00
$10.00

Suppose the Auditor on being asked the question should give it as his opinion that this account was in the hand writing of Mr. Gregg, when in truth and in fact it was in the handwriting of A. L. Wheeler, who drew it up at the request of Mr. Gregg. And suppose further, that it should be clearly established that Gregg, himself, presented the account to the Auditor, demanding his pay, and that he, with his own hand receipted it and received the money. The Court in such a case would decide that the question of who wrote the account was an immaterial point in the issue. The only question for the jury to decide would be: how much fare he paid on the railroad and how much his wife charged him for staying at home one night. If nothing was charged the jury would be bound to convict. This is a true picture of the case. The convention required him to go to Madison on their business. He was drawing his regular per diem during his absence, but his necessary expenses they were bound to refund. The account which he presented and received is above copied. Of this ten dollars, not one cent was expended. No Whig in the State has attempted to justify his conduct, and the more he flounders the deeper he gets in the mire. We advise him to say nothing about it. It can't be either justified or explained. We know his feelings are terribly harassed about this thing. We sympathize with him in his distress of mind, and when we think of him as he was and as he is, a tear of sorrow gushes forth. We fear he will give way to despair and exclaim:

"There is nothing which I cannot bear,
Since I have borne this withering blow."

The Wheat Crop.

The Anderson Gazette says, "it seems that the severity of the winter did not injure the wheat. So far as our observation extends, it stands thickly and evenly. The amount of this grain sown last fall, will fall at least one third short of the previous year in this county, and if any disaster should happen to the present crop, between this and harvest, there will be a scarcity for home consumption, unless a good deal of the last year's produce still in the country, is retained by the farmers. In view of all the circumstances, we think those who have wheat on hand, would not lose anything by holding on to it a few months longer. If the quantity sown last fall is, generally, much under the usual amount, prices will come up, even should the present crop yield well."

Reduction of Tolls.

The Terre Haute Courier understands that at a recent meeting of the Trustees of the W. and E. Canal held at Indianapolis, a very liberal reduction of tolls, on goods passing through the Canal, was agreed upon. The reduction is to a large amount and such as will be beneficially felt by merchants, dealers and traders on the Canal. This proposal of reduction, however must first be agreed to by the Ohio Board, before the same can go into operation. Of this agreement it is said there is no doubt that Board have already expressed a willingness to come into the new arrangement.

Iowa.

The Democratic State Convention of Iowa has made the following nominations: For Secretary of State, Geo. W. McCreary; Auditor, William Patton; Treasurer, M. L. Morris; and for Presidential Electors, George H. Williams, Augustus Hall, J. C. Fletcher and W. E. Leflingwell. P. B. Bradley, W. F. Coolbaugh, S. S. Carpenter and George Gillespie were appointed as Delegates to the Baltimore Convention. No preference was expressed as to the Presidency.

We are requested to state that Herr Alexander has extended an invitation to the Principal, Teachers and Scholars of the Deaf and Dumb Institution, to attend his exhibition on this afternoon, which has been accepted; and that one hundred seats have been reserved for their use. This entertainment being intended especially for the amusement of Ladies and Children, will be entirely different from the evening performances.

Herr Alexander drew a crowded house on Monday evening.

Modern Barberism.

On Sunday last all the Barber-shops in the city were closed by order of the City Marshal, and many and long were the unshaven phizzes which came within my view on that day. I would suggest, in consideration of the high state of morals now prevailing in the city, that the officials be directed to request all persons who are in the habit of using the tooth brush, to desist from washing their teeth on the Sabbath, as it comes under the head of labor. The man who is fond of sleeping late, thinks he will not get up at all, on Sundays—the labor is too great for his conscience. But Prof. Gardner says that those who abhor Sabbath-breaking, need not fear to use his soap on the first day, for it is no labor to shave with it.

I understand, also, that a hard-working mechanic cannot take a buggy-ride with his wife on Sundays, without being branded as an outlaw.

The following lines from the London Punch will suit this meridian at this present writing, in my opinion.

MORALITY WITHOUT BIGOTRY.

A DUET BETWEEN LORD STURGEON AND MR. MAYHEM.

Lord S. Do you shave on Sunday ever?

Mr. M. Oh, dear, no! Of course not. Never!

Lord S. It would be a sin; it would be a sin.

Lord S. All unshorn I go,

Mr. M. With moustache hairy;

Lord S. Shaving is, we know,

Mr. M. Necessary.

Lord S. Strictly thus we keep our Sunday,

Mr. M. Rigidity so, rigidity so.

Lord S. Take you tea, or any victual,

On Sunday morn, for breakfast, hot?

Mr. M. Cold, of course. What, boiled the kettle?

Lord S. Toast we wouldn't have made,

Mr. M. With bread contained.

Lord S. Eggs—wouldn't have laid,

Mr. M. Could we prevent it.

Lord S. Strictly thus we keep our Sunday,

Mr. M. Rigidity so, rigidity so.

Lord S. What have you for Sunday's dinner?

Mr. M. Roast meat, of boiled, stew or fry?

Lord S. Do you think I'm such a sinner?

Mr. M. Cookery? Fiel Cookery? Fiel!

Lord S. Cold meat will suffice

Mr. M. To keep from starving?

Lord S. Nay, 'tis my advice,

Mr. M. To give up carving.

Lord S. Strictly thus we keep our Sunday,

Mr. M. Rigidity so, rigidity so.

Hon. William C. Stuart.

We commend the following letter of Hon. O. B. Torbert Representative from Dearborn County, to the attention of our readers:

INDIANAPOLIS, May 10th, 1892.
HON. WILLIAM C. STUART, OF CASS.—Behind me sits Hon. W. C. Stuart, member of the House from the county of Cass, a democrat at heart, but a judge of the Supreme Court for the first district.

It gives me great pleasure to note the evidences of the intellectual strength, sound discriminating judgment, and eminent legal attainments of Mr. Stuart. I am not an acute observer of men, but an intimate association with him, as a member of the House of Representatives, affords a fair opportunity of judging the man. He is certainly a sagacious, clear-headed legislator, and the advocacy of measures exhibits a resolute-ness of purpose truly remarkable. He is a bold reasoner—not hesitating to launch out upon the open sea—may be, against the tide, or brave a tempest of defamation with which he may be assailed. He is, also, a safe, prudent counsellor, holding a steady and firm rein upon the wild spirit of innovation and of rash reform. More than once have I heard the remark: "Stuart is a strict constructionist." That is especially true of him. As an interpreter of the constitution he never fails to protest against trifling with it, or against perversion of its language and meaning. His protests are urged with earnestness and power.

Stuart is emphatically a logician. I have listened to many of his speeches with deep interest—always hearing a lucid explanation, or a courageous attack upon what he deems a fallacy, or a thorough revision of a subject which it has been his province to examine.

The traits I have mentioned are observable in him as a member of the Legislature of '91 and '92. His usefulness is acknowledged by all. The selection of this gentleman as a candidate for Supreme Judge, is a source of the highest gratification to all who appreciate his talents and qualifications.

Mr. Stuart, as I am informed, entered Amherst Academy, Mass., to prepare himself for a collegiate course in 1827. He graduated at Amherst College, the highest honors of the institution. He was then appointed Principal of Mayville Academy, N. Y., where he remained three years. Meanwhile, he devoted his spare time to the study of law in Judge Osborne's office. Being ambitious and studious he progressed rapidly in his studies.

In 1836 he located at Logansport, in this State, and commenced practice. In 1843 he was elected Prosecuting Attorney for the circuit.

Mr. Stuart has the benefit of a long experience. His reputation as one of the first lawyers in Northern Indiana, is well known. It is the result of study—of unwearied, close and steady application to the profession which he chose in early life, and for which his talents and excellent traits of character fitted him.

To the people of Indiana he will be acceptable as a Supreme Judge. Thoroughly versed in legal science, a close and patient thinker, a prompt and impartial Judge, he cannot fail to establish a reputation unsurpassed by that of any Jurist in the State. Associated with the three other distinguished lawyers, who were nominated by the democratic party, he will be an accession to the Supreme Bench, of which the great State of Indiana may be justly proud. Yours, T.

ELECTIVE JUDICIARY.—Although we have no manifest evidence, that James Hughes, Esq., editor of the Bloomington Gazette, is absolutely opposed to the election of Judges, by the people, it must be apparent to every one, that he is aiming at something new, when he advocates so strenuously the doctrine that Party politics should not enter into those elections. Whether he conscientiously believes what he advocates, we are unable to say, but we are assured that the Democracy of this section of the State, will not second him in his incendiary attempt to defeat the election of Judge Perkins next fall.

Indefatigable industry and unblemished integrity, have won for Judge Perkins, an enviable character, which he has nobly sustained through out the whole course of his judicial career. He is a legal qualification, moral worth, and political principles, are eminently calculated to qualify him for a seat on the Supreme Bench, and to effect it he will receive a warm, cordial, and undivided support from the Democracy of this District. Mr. Hughes may be anxious to acquire a notoriety by the peculiar course he is taking, but a notoriety for breaking down regular party nominations, and endeavoring to defeat good men, is not deserving of commendation, and certainly will not prove very profitable in the end.—New Castle Banner.

Wisconsin Legislature.—The Wisconsin Legislature has adjourned after a three months' session. Among the most prominent laws passed were a General Banking Law, a law providing for an Emigrant Agency in New York, an Apportionment law, and the State Loan and Supreme Court Law. The new Judges are to be elected in September next. The Banking law is to be submitted to the people at the election in November next, and will undoubtedly be adopted.

A bill submitting the Maine Liquor Law to a vote of the people, which passed the Assembly, was defeated in the Senate. The latter body also refused to concur with the former in its memorial to Congress to establish the Territory of Lake Superior.

Signs of the Times.—When you hear a lady laying great stress on her own virtue, it is a sign she is no better than she should be.

When you hear the cork from a small beer bottle snap, it is a sign it is about to fizzle out.

When a Bank calls its stock-holders together, and makes an extraordinary report, it is a sign that they are rotten and are trying to deceive its creditors. Look out for them, or you will get bit.

Riches are like eels in their native element, hard to be grasped, and when caught, easily slipping through one's fingers.

The Progress of Mormonism.

The progress of Mormonism presents not an uninteresting chapter in the history of the times. It seems not only strange, but astonishing, that so complete a delusion should be so successful in making converts in nearly all parts of the world; in England, France, Germany, Norway, India, and the islands of the Pacific, to say nothing of this country. And it forms matter for reflection, that even in this nineteenth century, the sentiment of religion, having its foundation in that sense of dependence felt alike by the rudest savage and the most cultivated Christian, can be made subservient to the most pernicious form of fanaticism.

Perhaps this progress may be ascribed quite as much to the efforts to check it as to any thing else. No sect has been more hotly pursued by fire and sword. Let their practices be what they may—let their creed be what it may—such a process, of all processes, is the least calculated to stop fanaticism. Nothing shows clearer the vantage ground it gave them than the tone of their paper. Their history constitutes food for daily reflection. Do they celebrate a public day—he it Christmas, or New Years, or a Fourth of July? The recital of their perils makes a part of their staple matter. The destruction of their temples—the killing of their chiefs—the massacre of their brethren mingle in their songs, and make the subject of their exhortations.

Now that such recitals, founded on real wrongs, should confirm the Mormons in their delusion, and even stimulate them in their zeal, constitute no more than a fresh illustration of a very old result. It has always been the case where physical force has been summoned to check a moral disease. Such forms a rallying point for sympathy, and often gives a bad cause a vantage ground which it ought not, rightfully, to possess. Still, to deal with this sect with their pernicious practices has been difficult, and it may be difficult in the future. One thing is clear as to the Mormons. The mass of them are sincere in their belief that Joe Smith was inspired, and that the Almighty made him instrumental in discovering the Book of the Mormons. Brigham Young is the successor to Joe Smith; and the tone of the language used by the saints indicates that the faith they had in Smith is transferred to Young. This may be deplored, but it seems to be a fact. The language we have quoted shows how fixed and vivid and fierce is their fanaticism; while history shows to what extent its promptings will push its votaries. Now what precisely is the political position of Young does not appear by their paper. There is nothing in it to indicate that his intention is to set himself against the government, unless two or three phrases in his message, where he speaks of "a free, sovereign and independent state," may indicate this. If, however, he should do it, and his fanatic followers should rally about him, there will be danger of new scenes of slaughter. Events in Utah may soon be of absorbing interest.—Boston Post.

A Touching Incident.

We heard yesterday of one of the most touching and sorrowful incidents that, in the whole course of our life, we have been called upon to record.

An aged mother—a woman of seventy years—left her home in the Emerald Isle some ten weeks ago to seek the abode of her children, who are now residents of Louisville.

After a tedious passage, and the trouble incident to a long journey, she reached this city from New Orleans last Monday night on board the Alex. Scott, and soon she was surrounded by her children.

Her son was the first to greet her, and he hastened to inform his sister of their mother's arrival. They met—(the mother and the daughter) in one long embrace, which only ended as the infirm mother sank with excitement to the floor. She had swooned away in the rapturous enjoyment of beholding once more a daughter so long lost to her. She pronounced a blessing upon her children, and then fainted away. Whenever restored to consciousness, the sight of her children, and the pleasing recollection of their presence, would overcome her with emotions, and again and again she would faint in their arms.

Physicians were called to her aid, but could afford her no relief. For two days she continued in this condition until worn out with fatigue and excitement, exhausted nature gave way, and the mother now "sleeps well" in the green earth of her new made home. How strong how sorrowful and how touching, are the incidents of life.—Louisville Democrat.

The Press in France.

The restrictions upon the press, notwithstanding the abrogation of the censorship law, are as onerous now as at any previous time. It is stated that forty-nine journals have ceased to exist in the departments since the coup d'etat, sixteen of which were organs of the Legitimists, and twenty-nine of the various shades of Republicanism. Of twenty-nine newspapers published in Paris on the 2d of December, only eighteen are now in existence, and two of these publish a semi-weekly instead of a daily issue. The press, in view of the restrictions on the press, consoles itself with the reflection that there are other matters besides polemical politics, which can be discussed, and instances the coming election in England, the downfall of Rosas, the United States Japan expedition and other foreign topics.
